The aim of the International Peace Summit (IPS), which is taking place from 10th to 11th of June, 2023 at the Central Tradeunion (ÖGB) is to publish an urgent global appeal, the “Vienna Declaration for Peace”, calling on political actors to work for a ceasefire and negotiations in Ukraine. Prominent international speakers will point out the dangers around the growing escalation of the war in Ukraine and call for a reversal towards a peace process.

Background

Civil society representatives from across Europe, North America, Russia and Ukraine will present the results of the IPS together with participants from the Global South. The conference will focus not only on criticism and analysis, but also on creative solutions and ways to end the war and prepare for negotiations. This is not only the task of states and diplomats, but nowadays more and more the task of the global civil society and especially the peace movement.

The invitation and the detailed program for the conference can be found at www.peacevienna.org.

Speakers

Reiner Braun, ancient president of the International Peace Bureau, Germany

Ann Wright, former US Colonel and Diplomat

Moderation

Leo Gabriel, Member of the International Council of the World Social Forum, Austria
